Work continues for you at the GA Capitol as summer winds down. One major initiative is Next Generation 911, which ensures that our emergency services have the best technology to help in your time of need. As the Senate Chairman of Public Safety, I appointed a subcommittee to work on this issue and to meet with and hear from experts this fall.

Kari and I are grateful for our family and enjoyed spending time with relatives this summer. Our family has many August birthdays, and we are excited to celebrate. It was a wonderful day, and I appreciate everyone who reached out to me.

Memorializing a Hero

The city of Roswell lost a true hero when Police Officer Jeremy Labonte died in the line of duty, giving the last measure of devotion to his community. To ensure his legacy lives on, I passed legislation to rename the GA 400—Holcomb Bridge Road interchange in his memory. The signs were installed, and we had an impactful ceremony with his family and the department. Please keep them in your prayers as we continue to honor the memory of a true first responder hero.

Eliminating the GA Income Tax

We are continuing to lower the income tax in Georgia. In the Senate, we are working diligently with standing and study committees to expedite the process of eliminating it! I have worked diligently with my colleagues and led on this issue to ensure hardworking Georgia families can keep their money.

Cherokee County Fire Foundation

I was honored to speak at the ribbon-cutting for the Cherokee County Fire Foundation. Chief Eddie Robinson and his team put on a great demonstration, and we expressed the need to help our fellow first responders.

In the future, the Chief and I will be gearing up to help raise money and put out a fire at the training facility. I hope you will watch and consider donating.

Mail Concerns

I continue to hear from constituents in Cobb, Cherokee, and North Fulton about issues with the Postal Service. My family and business have experienced some of the same challenges.

The USPS falls under the federal government, but our office has been meeting and escalating systemic problems with our counterparts in Congress and the USPS. We hope to see some much-needed changes in the future.
